

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

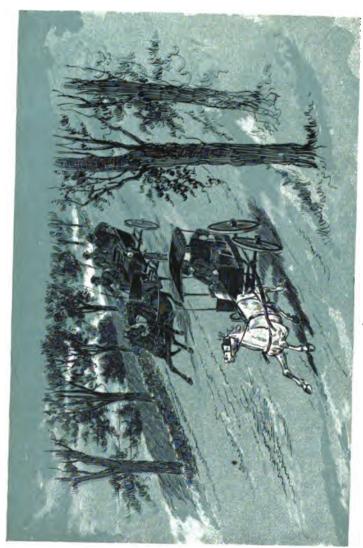

o object

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

i

A MIDNIGHT RACE

OLD COLONY HILL.

PRIVATELY

BOSTON ⊕ TICKNOR AND CO ⊕ MDCCCLXXXVIII

THE NEW YORK
PUBLIC LIBRARY

279980B ASTOR, LENOX AND TROEN POUNDATIONS

Copyright, 1888

By ASA P. POTTER

All rights reserved

PRESS OF

ROCKWELL AND CHURCHILL

BOSTON, U.S.A.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

SKETCHED FROM NATURE BY F. MYRICK.

QUINCY STATION.

THE WHITE HORSE ASLEEP.

Ears and Tail down.

QUINCY BRIDGE.

THE WHITE HORSE AWAKE.

Surprise Number One.

"THE POINT PROPOSED."

"A PHANTOM FIGURE."

Surprise Number Two.

CUSHING HOUSE.

No Stop for Refreshments.

OLD COLONY HILL.

"JERUSALEM, MY HAPPY HOME."

THE FINISH.

Gardifer de.

TRIUMPH!

Ears and Tail up.

A MIDNIGHT RACE.

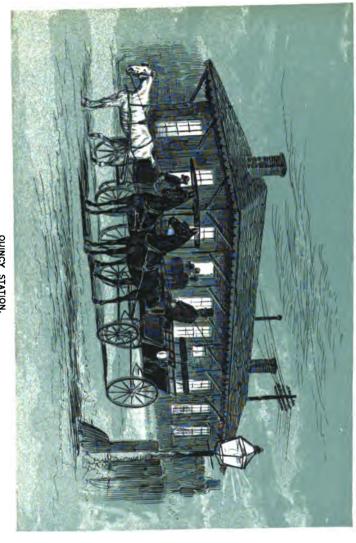

BY B. P. SHILLABER.

THOSE who reside at Jerusalem, Among suburban towns a gem

In Boston's regal crown, Sometimes, through politics or fun Or other cause, when day is done, No matter what, the fleet hours run

And they're delayed in town,
Until they every muscle strain
With eager, business-crowded brain
To catch the latest Quincy train
Which is to take them down.

Now this same fate to four befell (Once on a time, as we've "heard tell"). Banking, or Law, or Real Estate Had wearied them with pressure great, For whom the quick day wouldn't wait,

QUINCY STATION.

And so prolonged their stay till late,
Away from home's delights;
Took Moore's advice, who wisely says
The very best way to lengthen our days
Is to take a slice from our nights.

But well the loitering Brahmin knew
There waited him, at Quincy, two
Of the finest steeds that ever flew
O'er country roads, that would put them through;

So when, at ten, they lighted At Quincy station, there they found The prancing span that pawed the ground And neighed with most impatient sound,

To greet the ones benighted,
With a fine wagon, light and trim,
Over the South Shore roads to skim;
And as the Brahmin and those with him
Stepped into the team by the station's glim
They felt delay requited.

And there beyond was another team, Seen by the same light's steady gleam, That any one with a horse might deem

The ghost of an ancient steed, Of ghastly superhuman white, With drooping head, as if the light Were painful to his dimming sight,

Which might for pity plead; Long for usefulness given o'er, His hold to life frail tenure wore, A charger gone to seed. To the horse was hitched an ancient dray As frail as the Deacon's one-hoss shay On the morn of Lisbon's earthquake day,

With a harness of rusty leather,
Which looked as though, in a primitive way,
It had served in Governor Carver's day,
And to keep it from falling all astray
It was tied with thongs together.

And then a voice came out of the dark That none but the driver's ear could hark; "Those coursers must be beaten, mark,

If it costs a hundred dollars."

"Aye, aye, sir," was whispered back again.

Away went the thousand-dollar twain,

With Archie holding the bridle rein.

The old horse started to life again,

And dashed ahead at a lively strain,

Leaving it at the outset plain

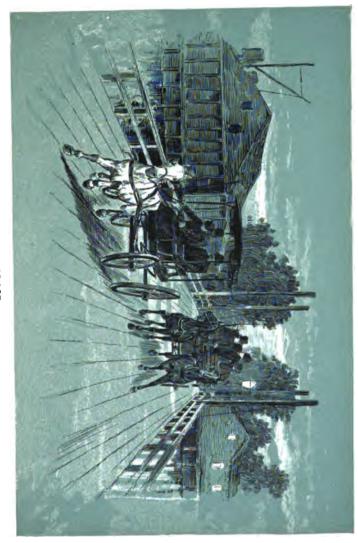

He wasn't a horse that "follars."

Through Quincy town, o'er Quincy bridge, They cleft the darkness like a wedge, And the curiosity set on edge,

Of people of quiet bent, Who peered out into the night to see What the cause of the rush might be, If the witches were back to Old Colony,

Or what the deuce it meant.

On went the mysterious flight, The old horse with his coat of white Making a mark on the slate of night,

Like thing of ghostly dread.

And Archie plied the vigorous thong,

To urge the thoroughbreds along,

And they showed their mettle fleet and strong,

But the white was still ahead.

"This is a dark case," Blackstone cried, Holding in place his jellying hide, His lofty brow of margin wide, Feeling the air that rushed like a tide; "A quo warranto should this matter decide,

And secure a stay of proceeding; But, my dear Brahmin, inter nos, This race in re mayn't be in pos., For us it threatens to be a loss Through that infernal old white hoss

That our advance is leading.

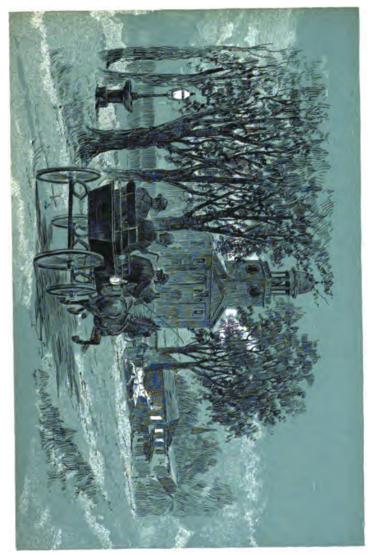

De jure, we the race have won,
'Gainst such a monstrous beast to run,
But yet, de facto, 'tisn't done,
And we shall have to stand the fun
Spite of all our special pleading."

"Wait," said the Brahmin, "yonder hill Will give the blasted beast his fill.

Archie, now put in with a will,

Keep right close to his heels."

Uphill and downhill then they tore, Such speed had ne'er been known before, Along that favored southern shore,

As record ne'er reveals.

"Give 'em the whip," the Brahmin cried,
But all in vain the string he plied,
He couldn't urge the span beside
The shaky wagon wheels.

But when diverging roads they reach,
One leading down to Downer's beach,
The Brahmin, with exultant speech,
"We'll go by then," he said,
"And we will into Hingham go
(Lay on the whip and prove it so),

At least ten rods ahead."

Then on they dashed through thick and thin, Waking strange echoes by their din, In hope the distant goal to win.

The stars looked down with a seeming grin,

The stirring scene to share.

When as they neared the "point proposed,"
A phantom figure was disclosed,
And like our "flag," as sung and prosed,
The old white horse was "there."

They kept right on as at the start,
The heads of the span o'er the tail of the cart,
The latter creaking in every part,
The road before them a hidden chart,

CUSHING HOUSE,

On through the darkness pushing, Until burst on their path a light, And a crowd of gazers came in sight (Who'd got a hint of the wondrous flight),

In front of Hotel de Cushing,
As the sightly team and the rattle trap,
With the Brahmin and Blackstone and t'other chap,
Went by the hotel rushing.

They sped away o'er Colony Hill, The ghostly whitey leading still, Down through the swamp, with ardent will, Down where the salamanders dwell,

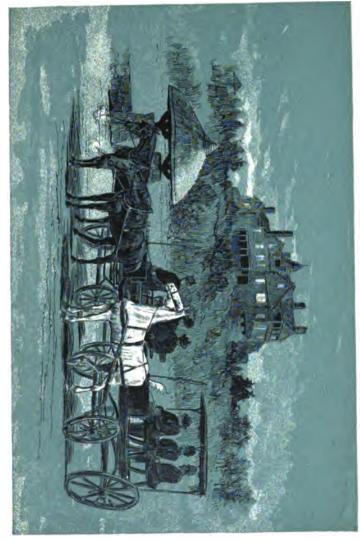

Down 'mong the summering squatters;
"They've bought that horse," the Brahmin said,
As he wiped the night dew from his head,
"And we are left, our courage fled,
Like clay in the hands of the potters."

Now they had reached the old thatched gate, The white horse stood their coming to wait, Who held up his head as if elate, That he'd led the span in contest straight

Full thirty-five minutes from starting. Then the Brahmin smiled and glumly said, "If the brothers had driven their plugs instead Of that old frame that is almost dead,

'Twould have had a better imparting."

Now all can see, as is often shown, Where wills are threatened and overthrown,

THE FINISH.

That "undue influence" alone
Could prompt to their preparing.
And here the hundred-dollar fee
Prompted the nag's cupidity;
For in those who neither feel nor see
The dollars' chink awakes esprit,
Which makes all possible to be,

And the nag, this feeling sharing, Responded to the magic tone Of stimulus round money thrown, And went it with full hand alone As those in euchre daring.

And thus the race should not be claimed For the old steed, spavined, blind, and lamed; The good steeds, in their status famed, For no vile failure should be blamed

Like this we've given place;
But still the cunning ones will chaff
And at the striking statement laugh,
That an old nag, dead more than half,
Should have won the midnight race.